

Information on minimum security update periods

This is an “internet-connectable product” which means that it is capable of connecting to the internet by using a communication protocol that forms part of the Internet Protocol suite to send and receive data over the internet.

This product contains software that is capable of receiving security updates where that software is pre-installed on the product by Electrolux.

In accordance with the UK Product Security and Telecommunications Infrastructure (PSTI) Bill No. 1007 of 2023, Electrolux will provide software support services for Electrolux and AEG brand products for a minimum period of 5 years from when Electrolux last distributed the product for sale. This includes critical and important security updates that will be distributed if an update is rendered necessary to keep the product secure.

In some circumstances such support services may include the supply of replacement physical parts or modules.

Where:

“Security update” means a software update that protects or enhances the security of the product, including a software update that addresses security issues which have been discovered by or reported by Electrolux

“Support period” means the minimum length of time, expressed as a period of time with an end date, for which security updates will be provided by Electrolux for this product.
